

CHAPCHAR KÛT

A spring festival, held between the cutting and the burning of jhum in the month of March. Of all the Mizo Kûts, Chapchar Kût is the grandest one and is often called festival of adults. The Chief, in consultation with his council of elders usually announced the day for Chapchar Kût well in advance for its celebration. The first day Lusei Vawk talh ni, a day of slaughtering pigs was marked with 'Chhawngnawh' a feast for children in the evening near the memorial platforms of the departed soul at the village entrance. The second day of the Kût is called 'Zupui Ni', a day of drinking beer and dancing. Young people with their colourful traditional costumes perform the Chai in the village square. The last day is called 'Zu Thing Ni'. On this day it was the turn of the chief and his council of elders to provide sufficient Zu (Rice Beer) to the young dancers. The dance would go on and on till the stock of beer runs out. Lustily singing songs and with their arms around each others' shoulders the young people in circle would dance in the open ground of the village in an endless dance of Chai. The Kût would then end up with a day break called 'Ei Puar Awm Ni'.

Chapchar Kût is a Festival of joy, love and affection. It is a time of peace and harmony between everyone.
